

A top-down view of a white ceramic plate with a scalloped edge and a green leaf pattern. The plate contains a meal consisting of braised pork (nikujiru) with a light brown sauce, shredded daikon radish (daikon) in a yellowish sauce, and a portion of dark green leafy vegetables (possibly spinach or chrysanthemum leaves) with a dark green sauce. A white ceramic bowl with a green leaf pattern is partially visible in the upper right corner.

A photograph of a hospital meal tray. The tray is light green and contains several white dishes. In the foreground, there is a large white bowl with a blue geometric pattern around the rim, filled with spaghetti in a light brown broth, topped with sliced cucumbers and tomatoes. To the right of the spaghetti bowl is a small white cup filled with a light green liquid, likely soup. In the background, there is a white plate with a piece of fried fish and a white bowl with a white substance, possibly rice or a side dish. The background is a plain, light-colored wall.
